

o Composition: Exams (Different ideas - Contrast)

What follows this introduction is a discussion about the pros and cons of taking exams. This subject will be considered under a modern point of view, leaving behind a personal opinion which could distort the purpose of it. (38 words)

On the one hand, education has recently (been) altered beyond recognition. Nowadays, new tools such as computers, digital blackboards, etc...are very often used in class. It's well known that new generations are eager to learn with them. This makes teachers be learning constantly, and not just that but the educational methods must be changing adapting them to these new technologies. (59 words)

On the other hand, it would be easy, whichever method was used, to teach when everybody in the class wanted to learn. However, and unfortunately, no everybody wants to learn or wants to be at class. This, obviously, makes everything complicated. It's proved that either with new technologies or classic methods some students simply don't want. (56 words)

Therefore, the idea of taking exams make some students hate education and everything related to it. The reason could be found if we took account of the fact that as well as there are students who find themselves comfortable with books, there are also others who prefer working to studying. (53 words)

Once the above has been considered, we can, clearly, reach the conclusion (that) this new reality demands a new way of acting. A new way which could reach everybody. And there is where IT plays an important role. Thanks to it, everybody could get fun by learning. This will also change the way of knowing if the student has learnt or not. Instead of calling exams, they could be called games or whatever name which didn't make the student thinks about exams. The further they feel from them, the better they feel and the more they learn. (96 words)

However, and lastly, for those students who just don't want to learn with any method, the system should be changed. They wouldn't be forced to stay in the school. Instead, they should have the opportunity to go to work. They would be much happier and the rest of the class, teacher included, as well. (54 words)

o Composition: Describing somebody

Introduction: The other day I had a dream where I was asked to describe my best friend, thing which wasn't a piece of cake. Anyway, I managed to do it. As it's well known, dreams are always easier than real life. Then, out of the blue the dream has just become real.

Conclusion: To sum up, I'm nuts about him/her. Now, it can be understood why he/she has been described in this way. All in all, the more time I spend with him/her, the better I feel. He/she's, without any doubt, both the salt of the earth and, at least for me, drop-dead gorgeous.

o Composition: Describing my city

I shall never forget the last glimpse which I had of the bus station when I left Zaragoza to go to live to another city.

It was some years ago and, although I had to spend several years out, I always had Zaragoza in my heart. I could remember ever corner, every smell, the Pilar square and its crowd of picturesque figures, all crossing themselves, as they stood round the Temple with its high four towers. Beyond the Basilica, I was able to imagine the young couples strolling towards La Seo, Zaragoza's Cathedral, where one can get lost hanging around the streets. This is known as "El Tubo", one of the oldest places of the city. An area where local people like going in the evenings, specially at weekends.

I must have been asleep, for certainly if I had been fully awake I'd have noticed the approach of my mother saying dinner was ready. Anyway, I'd like to finish this before having supper. Where was I? Oh yes, in "El tubo". Not far from there, one can find "Plaza de España". This could be said as the center of the city. From that point, towards the south, you can find, to your great delight, a vast number of shops with hundreds of shelves full of products. So, if you are interested in doing shopping, this is the right place.

I forgot to mention the river Ebro which is by El Pilar. It crosses all the city and from time to time it comes full of water which is a pleasure for the people who live in Zaragoza.

Generally speaking, there is no better place than the city/town/village where one spent the childhood. It usually brings back lovely memories which are never forgotten. [293 words]

o Composition: Violence in football

Introduction:

a) The other day, last Sunday, I watched on T.V. that half of Spanish people thought that football seemed/seems to be interlinked with the violence.

b) I was watching the T.V. last Sunday, as most of people, when I saw/thought that football was interlinked with violence.

Body:

On the one hand, people should receive a better education in order to avoid these problems. Besides, there is too much frustration which goes out at these times.

On the other hand, clubs are being vigilant at all times and reporting anything suspicious. Police is behind too. However, it seems as if there weren't violence, football wouldn't be as attractive as it is right now. At least, this is what is thought by many people.

Conclusion:

In my view, people who like football have the right to have a good protection. This will help to improve this beautiful sport
